"Mens sana in corpore sano,"
a Latin proverb went.

One day, early this week, a tall and husky gentleman who customarily takes three swims a day in the chilly ocean off Carmel Beach,

had some business in Monterey.
He can't drive an automobile, so he walked.

In our hydramatic, power-steered civilization, this hike over the sun-scorched hill would hardly be considered routine for a well-to-do 56-year-old author considered by critics as one of the finest writers of his time.

To Vilhelm Moberg, however, it was no athletic feat. He has walked a lot all his life, starting with his boyhood on a farm in Sweden, and coming to America has made no difference. A little stroll like that he hardly finds worth mentioning.

grants" and "Unto a Good Land", the latter the Literary Guild's selection for August, is currently in Carmel, visiting Gustaf Lannestock, a compatriot who has translated his two major works, the first two volumes of a trilogy about the life of Swedes who settled in America. He is looking for a house here--or somewhere in California--where he intends to write the third volume, as yet untitled.

He might decide to settle in Carmel. His aunt, who lives in San Leandro, told him, "There are some crazy people there. You better go there too."

Moberg has been in Carmel before. He lived in the Harrington house in the late 40's for a year and a half. Most of "The Emigrants" was written there.

"The Emigrants" was not a best-seller in this country, but "Unto a Good Land" has a good chance of being one of the year's top-sellers. In addition to its Literary Guild selection, it was picked by the Doubleday Christmas Club for December, which means another 50,000 copies.

Both of the books have been acclaimed by critics, here and abroad. In Sweden, Moberg's books sell almost as well as the Bible. His works have been translated into 17 languages, including German and Russian. Since, however, Moberg's works are liberally sprinkled with terms like "liberty" and "freedom", they provoked Hitler and Stalin into one of their few acts of agreement. Both dictators burned his books.

Today, Moberg's fame in America is assured. Moberg does not feel exactly flattered about his selection by book clubs, but as long as mass distribution organizations want his books the way they are, he doesn't mind, of course.

He says, however, that he is not "for sale unconditionally. I will not compromise what I put in my books to make them acceptable to a book club."

Moberg's big trilogy is an epic work, and the author feels that today's writers are returning to the epic.

"The psychological realism is going out," he says. "Authors are beginning again to tell a story in the simplest way, stories like they were told in the first parts of the Bible. The way stories have always been told."

Not that books of "psychological realism" were not good, in Moberg's estimation. In fact, he considers Thomas Wolfe a great novelist, and William Faulkner one of the greatest America has produced.

There are few new writers in America today," he says. "Very few after Faulkner, Hemingway and Steinbeck. Norman Mailer (The Naked and the Dead) and Irwin Shaw (The Young Lions) are the best of the young writers I have read. But the best book of the world of the year was written by Hemingway (The Old Man and the Sea) and I hope he gets the Nobel Prize.

What about something like "Gone With the Wind", which certainly did tell a story?

"Oh," says Moberg, "that's a lending library book. To pass the time."

Moberg speaks halting English, occasionally lapsing into Swedish words when they resemble their English equivalent. He is a big man, about 6 foot 2, with the weather-beaten furrowed face of a farmer, a man who spends much of his time outdoors. He has reddish-blond hair, John L. Lewis eyebrows and grey-blue eyes which, unlike most grey-blue eyes, do not look cool but warm and friendly.

He is also a little absent-minded.

ed. That's one reason why he can't drive. "He is always thinking of other things," his friend Lannestock explains.

Moberg started writing when he was ten. He submitted a story to a children's contest and won a prize: a mushroom chart.

"This," he says, "decided me to become an author."

But it took him 20 years before he could make a living out of it.

First he paid to have his books printed and formed his own publishing firm.

Tells Moberg:

"But as this firm only had one

Local Wives Hit Clothes Ban

ARMY WIFE Gerda Stanley models what the Colonel opposes. On inside pages she models more clothing which is now verboten in Germany. As to taking a stand on the issue, Gerda says, "No comment!"

"Next thing you know they will be teaching the Army women's fashions. Who does that silly old fool think he is, telling a gal how to dress? I'd like to see a Colonel tell me to cover up."

Remarks of violent protest to the new "Proper Women's Look" regulation of the Army in Germany were heard in a spot check of Armed Forces services wives here this week.

A few military wives, however, agreed with the Army's effort to "eradicate sloppy or sometimes less than decent dress" but balked at some of the restrictions.

Civilian wives had a firm, "Won't buy it" attitude.

Interestingly enough, all women seemed well acquainted with Colonel John H. Dilley and his proper order. If they hadn't read about it, they had heard about it.

Dilley, several weeks ago, in an order which the U. S. Army high command in Europe is now considering adopting for all posts in Occupied Germany said in effect:

Henceforth "women dressed improperly" will not be permitted to enter U. S. military installations in the Frankfurt area (which he commands). Also, included in the off limits ban were PX's, commissaries (groceries), theaters, snack bars and service clubs.

Specifically banned were:

No bareback, halter type sun-suits or dresses may be worn without a jacket or wrap.

No bare midriff costumes.

No strapless, low cut dress except in clubs or appropriate social functions.

No shorts on teenagers or women.

No blue jeans or slacks on "mature women".

No pin curlers unless the head is neatly covered by suitable scarf or headgear.

The Peninsula's service wives had these opinions:

One lieutenant's curvaceous wife said she was seriously considering cancelling her trip to Germany to join her husband. "Half my wardrobe is made up of strapless, bare-back sundresses. I defy any joker to tell me they are indecent. If anything is indecent, it is a bunch of hanging straps.

A Captain's wife exclaimed: "Ridiculous! Who does the silly old fool think he is! I'd just like to see him try some order like that over here. He would never get away with it. An adult civilian shouldn't have to have a ----- tell them what is decent. It is unAmerican."

An attractive corporal's wife moaned: "Hasn't the Army got anything else to do? Pretty soon soldiers will be going to fashion classes. They will be ruling on women's hair cuts next."

A Major's wife frowned: "The idea--in 90 degrees heat --no shorts, no backless dresses. Next they will want us to dress in khaki with two pleats down the front."

A Navy Commander's wife said: "Suggesting that sloppy dress and good taste be instituted is one thing. Telling you what you have to wear is another. I'm agin' it."

A trim Fort Ord Lieutenant's wife said:

"Why don't they leave the women alone? If they really want to improve the Army's appear-anced."

"Still," she held, "something ought to be done about girls in shorts around a place where there are many enlisted personnel--like I saw here the other day."

However, she felt the matter of "slacks or blue jeans would seem to be going too far. After all, they cover up more than a dress."

A Navy Lieutenant Commander's wife said: "The military has every right to regulate the American women's dress on a military installation, but it should make it conform to the customs of the area."

"I don't see anything wrong with strapless, open back dresses in public." She thought in Germany girls wore them. She was against slacks or shorts except around the house.

An Army Language School student's wife said she was against sloppy dress but the idea of a regulation appalled her. "This is just another infringement on the rights of the individual."

A Navy Lieutenant's wife thought the dress of American women overseas has hurt us. She said, "regulating what I should wear doesn't sit too well with me, but I'd go along if it is necessary."

She balked later when she learned that slacks for grocery shopping at the commissary was included. "That's going too far."

A Peninsula civilian's wife said: "I would leave it up to the discretion of a girl's husband. If he doesn't object, I don't see why the Army should."

"The only possible excuse for regulations," she said, "would be

By JOHN F. ALLEN

OF LOVE AND DEATH

Graeber, the protagonist of Erica Maria Remarque's new novel, A TIME TO LOVE AND A TIME TO DIE (Harcourt, Brace, $3.95), is a German soldier in World War II. He has returned on leave from the Russian front, where the retreat from Stalingrad is turning into the final despairing defeat of Hitler's Reich. He carries the shared guilt of Nazism like a gibbering monkey on his back. He stands in a garden looking at his old school friend, Binding, now turned S.S. colonel, cruel and imbued to the bone with the Hitlerian myth.

"Graeber looked at the satisfied, harmless face and, with sudden shock, he realized the eternal hopelessness to which justice and sympathy are condemned; always to suffer shipwreck on egoism and indifference and fear--he realized it and he realized, too, that he himself was not exempt, that he too was caught in it in an anonymous, indirect, and sinister fashion..."

John F. Allen, one of the top writers on the San Francisco Examiner staff, is a former West Coast editor of Time Magazine. He reviews books exclusively for this publication.

This is the novel's recurring theme: that mankind fails to struggle free of the morass of war and cruelty and fanaticism because of the egoism of the world's Bindings, the insensate fear of the Graebers and the indifference of nearly everyone. The emergence of a selfless, brave and dedicated man is so rare as to only emphasize the point.

This is not to say that the egoist cannot be generous to an old friend, that the coward cannot be brave under the lash of battle, that the indifferent cannot become belatedly aware as they scream in hatred at the departing allied planes that have wrecked their homes. But it is always too little and too late.

If this is the theme of Remarque's latest work--as it has been of his other novels--it is by no means all. The theme is sustained and interwoven by a wonderfully melodic counterpoint, a love story of magnificent depth and understanding.

We tend to assume that realism in matters of love and sex, as exemplified by so many modern novels, is a salutary matter, an indication of healthy freedom of thought and of knowledge. Yet, I wonder. I wonder if the use of four letter words, if all the avid descriptions of rumpled beds and naked flesh, of lust and passion, are not, after all, too simply an admission of failure on the part of the writer. It takes no great skill to describe a love affair in terms of the realities of fleshly action. Any man with a memory and a reasonable ability to put words to paper can manage it. It takes a great deal of skill and subtlety to evoke passion by indirection, through things unsaid. The difference is like that between the blunt (and soon blunted) lustiness of a burlesque strip-teaser and the true sexuality of a well and subtly dressed woman.

Remarque has managed here the evocation of love and passion and sensuality of tremendous power and vitality without once stooping to a word or description that could disturb the most Victorian of minds.

It is not, of course, that he is a prissy writer--far from it. It is simply that the man can write and that he has obvious respect for the imaginations of his readers.

Graeber, hunting for his parents in the bomb-wrecked city, comes upon Elizabeth, a friend of his childhood, who has lost her father to a concentration camp. Their romance blossoms and reaches at times moments of almost unbearable intensity, to the accompaniment of falling bombs and death and long hours in underground shelters. They crowd a lifetime into two weeks. They grow in knowledge as they grow in love, recognizing the hopelessness of justice and decency and the necessity of playing out their brief parts--not now out of egoism or indifference or fear, but simply because there is no other choice. There is nothing of hope in this fine novel, but there is real beauty and honesty.

Last year at a meeting of a psychiatric association I heard one of its members report on a female patient who contained within her three separate "personalities" of widely different sorts. The report was the sensation of the meeting, and since has been reported widely in various psychiatric journals.

The reports came, quite apparently, to the attention of Shirley Jackson, who you will remember, made her reputation out of that weird tour de force, "The Lottery", which first appeared as a short story in the New Yorker and later was published in book form.

In any case, Mrs. Jackson now has appeared with an alleged novel called THE BIRD'S NEST (Farrar, Straus and Young, $3.50), obviously based on that original psychiatric case--but going it one better. The subject of the book is a young woman whose mind is split into four different personalities, each fighting for the upper hand.

There's Elizabeth, a dreary and colorless woman, with a personality as mousey as her hair; there's Beth, all sweetness and tears and vine-like clinging; there's Betsy, wild and amoral, but rather honest and appealing; and there's Bess, the horrid, selfish, juvenile bitch.

Sound complicated? It's far worse than that in the hands of Mrs. Jackson. She has taken what might have been a first rate idea and has jumbled it into a mess of plain bad writing, sequences puzzling beyond understanding and cardboard characters.

It reads as though Mrs. Jackson had turned it out in a week. She obviously never thought her theme through and the novel does not even have the grace to end. Don't waste your money on this one.

COURTROOM TACTICS.... At the recent Fort Ord court-martial of a GI who didn't get a haircut, the major in charge of the prosecution, defense and what-have-you, was questioning the defendant. It had been proved that the lad had gotten a haircut, but the major asked, "Was it a proper haircut?"... the lad retorted: "You can only try me on one count at a time." The major leaned forward and exploded, "Who's running this court?"... Anyway, the soldier was released, but he also got an hour lecture from the major after the trial and this we don't print.

ONE DRINK TOO MANY.... At Nepen the other weekend we asked host Bill Fassett to say something funny... got a lot of old jokes... so we sat and listened to the cutsumers... A well-known movie producer came to the bar and said in a confidential tone to the bartender, "Give me one of those Bacardi things and really slug it,"... the bartender raised an eyebrow and the producer nodded in the direction of his table, "Well," he said, "I can only get one drink into her,".... and Sculptor Harrydick Ross said over the bar to us, "Don't tell me what you've been doing. I know. You're writing an article on Big Sur for the Ford Times. I asked 29 writers this week and they're all doing the same article." We weren't doing that article and, if anyone is interested, every travel mag in the country owns at least one article on the Sur.

REMOTE CONTROL.... We like last week's newspaper item about the birthday of Princess Margaret Rose... the new item stated that Margaret and friend Colin spent a quiet day and "... they drove to the moors in the early afternoon and when they returned they were sitting together in the back seat." ... WHO WAS DRIVING??!!

SPIRITED YOUTH .... Last week someone or ones broke into the Barn Theatre at the Los Laureles Lodge and destroyed everything they could get their hands on.... They smashed all the windows, tore electric fixtures off the walls, broke up the properties and slashed all the sets which were waiting to be painted for the theatre's forthcoming production, "The Monster".... writer Richard Haggopian heard about it at the Village Corner and said, "Must have been the work of a sets maniac."

VITAMIN B, C, D1.... We received a lot of advance publicity about Calypso Joe and his partner, Coco-Te, the dance team now appearing at Mills Hoffman's "Redwood Gardens".... Not being the kind to believe all we read, we asked a talent agent friend from San Francisco if he had seen the pair perform... he had... he said that they are both slightly sensational and he added, "Man, that coco-te is the healthiest thing to ever come down the pike!".... She dances, too.

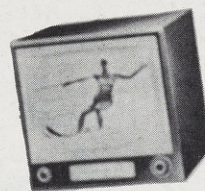

COCO-TE

ON THE TOWN.... ...Leroy Smith's combo has left the Town House in Seaside.... funny thing.... this jazz outfit with Sammy Peoples on the tenor sax was packing them in... anyway a new outfit will move in next week.... Customers objected to the nude of Marilyn Monroe behind the bar at the Mission Inn and she now has the place of honor in the beer stock room.... Drummer Benny Compagno has taken Ray Gorum's place at Pigalle... Ray has made a deal with Harry Tanous and has taken over the old Show Bar on Pacific Street... the bistro is now called "The Black Orchid", has a new interior and Gorum is dividing his time between hosting and drumming.... Roy Tillery, of the Navy School, has been sitting in on the drums around the Peninsula spots and he is the greatest beat man in the area.... and Carmel character Pon Chung was walking on Alvarado Street in a large straw Mexican sombrero.

TEN CENTS WORTH.... Artist Jay Hannah writes that he is tiring of Paris and will soon head for Spain.... Author Lillian Bos Ross is re-writing her third novel and doesn't enjoy the task.... restaurateur Vic Knight who opened the original "Ring's" on Pacific Street has now opened another "Ring's Restaurant" on Abrego Street... better than the last place.... Bruce Ariss did the signs and a huge Alex Weyger's sculpture stands in the courtyard.... Norm Poston will run another art exhibit out in the Valley over the Labor Day weekend.... besides the work of local painters he will show an original Whisler and the paintings of Willie Pagano.... Brett Weston planed to L. A. last week and appeared on the teevee show "What's My Line".... Artist Norm Godby is back from Italy with wife and family.... AND his new Lancia.... he is the only owner of this Italian auto on the Peninsula.

HERE WE GO.... "It's time to grow your hair".... wait, now, we didn't say it... Michel, a fashion expert from Helena Rubenstein said it.... Seems Michel took a flyer from the Bronx to Paris and came back with the news that "The undulating line makes hair news for fall.".... This means that the hair is longer, smoother.... The gam-in, they say, is gone for good.... gosh, Dad.... and the colors must change.... brunettes must become redheads.... and blondes must switch from silver to "warm gold".... Didn't know it was a "fashionable" thing to say, but when we mentioned this to a gal on the street she gave us an icy stare and said, "Turn blue!"

A MATTER OF OPINION.... freelance cartoonist Bill O'Malley uses a lot of stamps to send his material off to magazines. When he buys stamps he gets them in large quantities.... We followed O'Malley at the stamp window last week and he handed the girl a list of the number of stamps he wanted.... As usual the O'Malley humor was included.... the girl read: "One hundred three's, one hundred two's, fifty sexes..." She stopped. Gracious," she exclaimed to Bill, "Aren't two enough?"

SHADES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES.... A few weeks ago when the proprietor of an Alvarado street pool hall received a letter threatening his life and telling the owner to leave a sum of money in a cigar box on street corner, the Monterey police and FBI men were alerted. When the amateur extortionist came for his loot there were five cops and three FBI men plus two reporters standing on the corner waiting for him. The guy picked up the box, the cops made their arrest... and one of the reporters said, "Man, that's what I call police work!"

BLOOD BANK IN CARMEL SEPT. 16

Mark Wednesday, September 16th on your calendar--it's the day the Blood Bank makes its quarterly visit to Carmel, American Legion Hall on Dolores, between the hours of 10:00 and 1:30.

Especially needed are donors whose blood is the -O- Negative type. Heavy emergency demands have cut down the stock on hand to a dangerous point.

Mrs. Stanley Cummings, new Canteen chairman, promises the usual fine buffet luncheon, which has made a visit to the Blood Bank a minor social event in the past. Mrs. Virginia Erion is in charge of obtaining canteen workers for the date.

Many who have been anxious to give, but unable, due to malaria or jaundice, will be glad to know that their blood can now be taken, for use in making blood fractions. These fractions are used in the fight against polio, measles and jaundice. Other fractions are of use in brain surgery, etc.

Blood collected locally is used locally, the only charges made being the hospitals' laboratory fees. Adequate blood supplies are usually on hand in local hospitals, but a rapid emergency service is available to bring extra supplies from the Center in San Jose.

The Wharf Has a Hit

GERTRUDE CHAPPELL.....BILL GORDON

The Wharf Players got back in the hit parade this week with "The Male Animal", their smoothest show in many months.

The James Thurber-Elliott Nugent play, though written 14 years ago, is surprisingly timely and despite all sorts of significances does not get lost in a lot of sophomoric soapboxing. It sticks to theater and entertainment in an admirable combination of drama and slapstick, something which nowadays hardly anyone seems to be able to write anymore.

Given this craftsmen's vehicle, the Wharf Players do a workmanlike job.

Thomas Brock's direction is excellent: meticulous in detail, fast-paced, well-timed, well-disciplined. The cast clicks. In fact, not since "I Am A Camera" has a Wharf cast worked out so well together.

Several new faces are making their first major local stage appearance in this show. Everyone of them seems like a welcome addition to the Peninsula's theatrical ranks.

Gertrude Chappell, who plays the leading female animal, is tops. So are Elsie Welch, as a five-by-five colored maid, and Keith Roper, a young man from

WOMEN WHO DO THINGS By BARBARA HALL

A RED FEATHER IN HER CAP

Keeping her fingers at the controls of 17 different agencies, coordinating funds allotted to the agencies—all these are among the duties of Marian Todd, executive secretary of the Monterey Peninsula Community Chest. But these myriad activities don't faze Marian Todd, who's as calm and collected a person as you'll find sitting behind a desk in a big organization.

"No agency," Mrs. Todd says, is better than its volunteer leadership. And the Monterey Peninsula is unusually fortunate in the talent that is donated free to the campaigns. "For instance," Mrs. Todd says, "this year we'll have drawings for our publicity done by Hank Ketcham, Bruce Arriss, and Eldon Dedini."

By this time next month, the Peninsula will be swarming with businessmen, housewives, anyone who will give time to help raise funds for the Community Chest. The goal this year is $92,700, which is $11,000 more than the Chest raised last year.

"Most of the increase," Mrs. Todd explains, "will go to the health and the welfare agencies." A new nurse will be added to the Visiting Nurse Association—about 25% of all the calls made by the visiting nurses are free—made possible by funds from the Community Chest.

The functions of the Family Service Agency have expanded, with more and more people coming for help and counseling on personal problems, and occasionally, financial aid in emergencies, where public aid is not available.

Mrs. Todd speaks of this facet of the Community Chest with understandable pride. "We're the only area between San Jose and Santa Barbara with a trained social worker."

Mrs. Todd has, on occasion, taken over the task of the social worker in the Family Service Agency, when the regular worker is on leave. She's had training in social work, and says, "Here is the human side!" She'll do only the minimum, emergency work, and says, "I wouldn't begin to take on any marital counseling!"

Another area where Mrs. Todd steps in is as janitor of the offices. "When we first started, I was THE janitor!" she laughs. Now they have a janitor once a month, but Mrs. Todd takes care of the in between periods herself.

In addition to Mrs. Todd in the offices, the Community Chest employs Ruth McElroy, well known comedienne on the Peninsula. "Ruth answers the telephone, keeps the books, and keeps us amused." Marian Todd first came with the Monterey Peninsula Community Chest in 1937. There was a need for a person who had a combination of experience in social work and business. She had both, having worked with the State Relief Association in Santa Barbara, and also having worked as a secretary.

There were only seven agencies under the Chest in 1937 and since then she's helped it grow, has seen it move three times, til now it occupies its cheerful, airy offices at 486 Pierce Street.

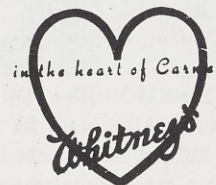

She's a native Californian, having been born in San Rafael, and a real Carmelite—came here in 1907, when her family built a "summer" house on the northeast corner of Santa Lucia and Dolores. "My father designed it. We had the first 'court' in Carmel." Later they made it into an all-year-round house, and there Mrs. Todd now lives with her 82-year-old mother, Mrs. George Boke, and two dogs, "I'm the passionate mother of a poodle, 'Monsieur Aggresso' and a cocker, 'Tura'." has a son, John Todd, who works for the San Francisco Examiner, and a 20-months-old grandchild.

Marian Todd is a well known figure on the stages of the Peninsula, too. She began as a child at the Forest Theater, and has played comedy, tragedy, and many different character parts in almost all the little theaters around here. Her last part was the mother in "Ring Round the Moon" at the Circle Theater. She finds acting "fatiguing", but she enjoys it. She probably will continue acting, "when there's a 'quiet' time in my work and when there's a part I could do justice to."

Marian Todd says she is not a "joiner"—has never joined any organizations. "At least I'll never have any trouble with the Government about joining any Communist organizations."

It's amusing to her to think back to the old days in Carmel when a person could buy property for $5.00 down and $5.00 a month and have it paid for in a few months—property that's now worth thousands. "I've never been acquisitive!" she says. "As far as money matters, they don't interest me!" Except when it's other people's money, then she becomes a true paragon of efficiency.

Her work at the Community Chest is an all-year-round, five-and-a-half-day week job. Besides the secretarial-managerial part, she serves on all the committees. "We never stop," she says.

When she does have some spare time, she works at the garden of her big home—"I'm not a fancy gardener—I just love to garden!", and almost every weekend finds visitors enjoying her hospitality.

Snapshot: GENERAL'S WIFE

The title, "Commanding General's Wife", might mean to some people "command performance", but nothing could be farther from the truth in the case of Millie Wright.

The wife of Fort Ord's commander, Major General Edwin Wright, maintains with a sincerity you can't help believing:

"Army wives are just camp followers. There is no rank among women."

Occasionally there is an Army wife with different ideas on the subject, but the tall, dignified, grey-haired lady likes to think that any respect paid to her by junior officers' wives is because of an age difference.

She admits that many of her close wife friends have husbands with stars or eagles on their shoulders, but points out that this occurrence is due mostly to age. We were all juniors once and have grown older together.

This does not mean that Millie Wright belittles the importance of a wife to a successful husband.

"Just like a big civilian corporation, a wife can break or make her husband unless she behaves with dignity, calmness and kindness."

Mrs. Wright admits that she has an advantage. Since her husband put on second lieutenant's bars 32 years ago, she has "loved the life of moving around."

"Every post looks greener until you are there and then you realize they are always about the same--until you are getting ready to move again."

Fort Ord may well be the end of the military line for the Wrights since the General hopes to retire in Carmel after duty here.

When that happens Millie Wright will find the transition into civilian life a simple one.

Today she does most of her own housework at their three bedroom home at the Presidio of Monterey; likes to have small gatherings at her home but to keep other social functions to a minimum; send presents to her grandchildren--the Wright's daughter is married to

PRESIDIO PLAYERS EARN CITATION FOR "SEE HOW THEY RUN"

The Presidio Players proved this week that amateurs without pretensions can provide good entertainment - and cheaply too: six bits.

They turned the Tin Barn at the Army Language School into a theater for the third time this year and came up with a light and simple comedy, just right for a relaxing evening.

Their presentation, "See How They Run", a three-act farce by Phillip King, set in post-World War II England and involving an adequate number of stock comedy characters and stock comedy situations, is no literary masterpiece, of course.

But its very predictability, its familiar development, presented by a fresh and enthusiastic cast under capable, fast-paced direction, made it a hit with the audience at the Presidio as it would have anywhere.

The credit for pulling the show together and making it move - and how! - goes to Christine Caruthers, who had also directed an earlier Presidio presentation.

The credit for putting it over goes to everyone who was in it. There wasn't one true due.

Lieut. Bill Devlin was, perhaps, the most exuberant participant of all. We are reasonably sure, in fact, that he added some impromptu lines to the play, one, in particular, of special humorous significance to those familiar with Army medical examinations.

Other enthusiastic members of the cast were Pat Devlin, Donnie Freeman, Shirley Powers, Peter Houck, Mark Branstetter, Howard Knapp, James Barthel and Howard Brown.

The set was excellent. It was executed by Howard Brown, Peter Houck and Bill Devlin from furnishings lent by Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Robert B. McClure, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. W. E. Dunkelberg, Lt. Col. and Mrs. R. J. Demers and Lt. and Mrs. Peter L. Houck.

Others who worked on the show in various capacities included Bill Kennedy, Harry Dinwiddie, Jean McClure, Judy Dunkelberg, Mary Lou Smith, Connie Brown, Mrs. Doris Rohr, Mrs. Michael Belykoff and Peg Knapp. --G.S.B.

"MALE ANIMAL" A HIT AT WHARF

Stockton who gives a first-class portrayal of a friendly, if somewhat foolish, football hero returning to the campus of his fame after putting on some extra pounds and some extra years.

Miriam Alexander, in a small part, is a scene stealer. The play is well worth the price of admission alone for the little business with which she has endowed her otherwise thankless role.

Another newcomer, Jane McGowan, shows definite promise as an ingenue although, at this point, she still fills her clothes more admirably than her role. But she too, being quite charming and very collegiate looking, is more than adequate in her part, and the rough edges of her apparent inexperience peek through only on rare occasions.

George Gordon, by now an old Wharfer, plays the lead with his usual off-hand competence. Leon Altneu is excellent in a very difficult role. Nick LeFeuvre plays an almost tailor-made character bit. Florence Keaton is fine in another short part, and Glen Nielsen, until recently stiff and self-conscious on stage, is now confident and pleasing.

Very popular with the audience is Ralph Slayton, a relatively recent Wharf find whose manner is somewhat reminiscent of Jimmy Stewart's. Shy young men who stubbornly cling to ill-defined ideals are popular on the stage - if not in real life: this probably accounts for Slayton's Wharf success. We felt, however, that pleasing as his interpretation of the role of the editor of a college literary magazine might be to some, it is not a valid interpretation and, therefore, quite valueless except as a crowd pleaser. Which, to us, seems to indicate that Slayton ain't no actor but a stock type, one you either like or don't.

The sets, done by LeFeuvre, are clean and pleasant, a welcome change after the Wharf's underprivileged production of "School for Scandal".

"The Male Animal," which you should see by all means, plays Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays at 8:30 this and following weekends. Shaw's comedy-drama, "The Devil's Disciple", will open Monday night for the Wharf's mid-week presentation. The house is dark Thursdays. --G. B.

But with the same old traditional service that put such a stigma on the name that we had to sell out and go in hiding for several years.

We hope our former customers have again worked up an appetite for Ring's food which is not unsurpassed anywhere.

In addition to the original bill of fare which listed such rare delicacies as FIRE SALE hamburgers slightly scorched and greatly reduced in size we will feature teriyaki-mulligan stew and that specialty of the old Waldorf-Astoria, Lump Gump. If our memory serves us right, they called it Chicken a la King.

Anyway we are happy to be back and as a special attraction for opening week we have a display of the Huneke twins antique fans and pantaletes.

SPEAKING OF CHILDREN....what about their musical education? At ABINANTE'S MUSIC STORE, near the State in Monterey, you'll find all kinds of fine new instruments--trombones, saxes, trumpets--all of which a student can rent for two months and then, if he wishes, apply the rental on the purchase price, a generous arrangement. On a piano there's 6 months to make up your mind. And just think, a full 88-note Wurlitzer, a modern spinet complete with bench, costs only $570. No home is quite complete without a piano and Abinante's has one to fit your home, your pocketbook and your taste.

(HOLDOVER LIKELY)....that's the inside scoop on "Hobson's Choice", a funny funny with Charles Laughton in a made in heaven part at the HILL THEATER (Soledad Drive just off Hiway 1) scheduled thru the 9th. If it doesn't 'hold,' there'll be an excitement in Technicolor, Sept. 10-14, with Claude Rains, Marta Toren and Marius Goring of "Red Shoes" fame, "Paris Express"; plus "Birth of a Ballet" with the Sadlers Wells company. And then, oh boy, and then, a new Alex Guinness, "Malta Story". Who cares what that's about!

Naturally, you'd expect to find the finest types of greeting cards as well as books at The Poor Scholar; what amazes me is that the beautiful selection is for us mere mortals.

TWO VERY NEW AIDS to gardening have just come to my attention; listen sharply. What say you to an easy way to get rid of ugly brown spots on your lawn, to level the humps, to give you a smooth greensward? Try the Water Bore ($4.95); it weighs 1-1/2 lbs., sounds like magic, IS magic....and works entirely on your water pressure.

The other miracle is RX-15, as all around, all purpose fertilizer that Harry at THE GREEN THUMB, 538 Hartnell Street, Monterey, says is REALLY GOOD. According to him (I've not had time to see results at home) your garden will, "Grow like never before".

Sunday starts another delightful comedy, "Four Days' Leave", filmed in Switzerland and involving Cornel Wilde, winter sports and other lovelies. Sept. 8-11, the sensational "Act of Love", Paris as the tourist never sees it, starring Kirk Douglas. Sept. 12-14, that wonderful Western, "Red River", will be revived. And don't forget Saroyan's "The Beautiful People" in-the-round each week-end, a tenderly beautiful comedy you shouldn't miss.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Sir:

In the August 6, 1954 issues of "The Armed Forces Banner" and the "Pacific Grove Tribune" where you described my life story, the headline "Ex-Nazi at Presidio" does not correspond to the truth and may create a wrong impression. I was never a member of the Nazi party or a Nazi sympathizer. Moreover, I did not volunteer to join the German army but I was drafted in the same manner as millions of young people were drafted all over the world.

In other respects the story was fair and accurate.

I hope that you will call this error to the attention of your readers so as to avoid a misconception affecting thousands of democratic German youths compelled to serve in the Armies of Adolph Hitler against their will.

Yours very truly,
HARALD LINDES

author - myself - it soon went broke. All the books of the firm were crowding us in the house so I carried all these books to a lake, weighted them and sank them.

Later some piscatorial ailment hit the lake and all the fish died."

"While I write, everything comes to me, everything I need to know about my characters. Fortunately I never know in advance what will happen to them or what their fate is - I write the book in order to find out.

"As the novel develops I let my people develop in undisturbed freedom - they can do anything they want. I am sometimes surprised at the things they do. I never thought they had it in them.

"If I knew in advance what would happen, I would, of course, lose all interest in writing the novel. As long as I believe in surprises, within myself and in my characters, I will continue to write books.

"To write is to discover. Do you understand?"

It was not easy for Moberg to make up his mind to come to America to live. He did not want to come, he said, "as long as a man like McCarthy exists." Lan-nestock, however, convinced him in letters that McCarthy did not represent the American people.

"In Sweden," Moberg says, "the anti-Communists do not like McCarthy. They abhor his methods, his unprincipled principles. But the Communists like him because he is the best anti-American propaganda they have. He is the Communists' best friend."

Feeling reasonably sure now that the McCarthy star is on the wane, Moberg will bring his family to the States as soon as he has found a home for them. He won't walk quite as much then. His daughter will drive him around.
